...new churches such as Via Vite, a church plant in San Bernardino, CA, are joining the BGAV. As they prayed for their church community’s “next steps,” they asked: What does a wider faith community look like for us? Who has had deep roots in missions and church planting? In finding the BGAV, they wrote that “We are so excited to partner with an association of churches throughout the US (and world) that is seeing the Gospel spread, lives transformed, disciples made, and churches sprouting up all over.”

...dozens of college students and young adults traveled overseas on missions, learning about how God is at work in the world. This Kairos Missions Initiative group posed for a photo before leaving for Romania in support of Virginia’s partnership with the Baptists there.

...children and youth gathered together into three choirs for the Virginia Baptist All-State Choirs concert. These auditioned choirs allow the students to discover and utilize their God-given talents within the context of music and worship leadership, as they sang with others outside of their own surroundings who also enjoy singing.

...eleven Venturers were sent out through Virginia and all over the world in the name of Jesus. Mikayla Clarke, Kyle Julius, Erin Waddell, Meghan Young, and Fiona Waddell served as Impact Mission Camp staffers. Alma Vela and Sarah Phillips served in Lebanon, Drew Dellinger served in Austria, Lindsey Hughes served in Ghana, and Hannah Strouth and Kristin Marker served in southwest Virginia. You may read more about their experiences this summer at BGAV.org/Venturers.
